BUREAU OF INFORMATION.

THE undersigned, editor of this manual and of the monthly departmental journal, entitled "The United States Record and Gazette," offers his services to those in need of information, advice, or assistance, in any matter requiring the action of the legislative, executive, or judicial authorities at Washington, or elsewhere, at home or abroad, or in any matter wherein the inquirer may have cause to believe that he can be better or more speedily informed, advised, or assisted, than at home.

Persons who deem themselves to have just and efficient claims and influences upon the public patronage which have not been recognized, may find in this offer an opportunity of obtaining such special information and advice as they need to make their efforts successful; but the undersigned does not profess to be able to influence appointments, directly or indirectly. Persons who are in want of political, official, or historical information, which can be more readily obtained from the immense collection of manuscripts, bound and pamphlet books, and records accumulated at the seat of government than by other means, are invited to avail themselves of this agency. Persons interested in getting cadetships, lieutenantcies, or medical appointments, in the army, or cadetships, or pay, medical or marine appointments in the navy, can obtain necessary information.

Many years' residence at Washington, with daily experience within and before the public offices, justifies the undersigned in asserting that he can often perform material service to the absent or inexperienced, and to such he extends the suggestion, not to refrain from addressing themselves to him because of a doubt whether theirs is a case or question within the scope of this announcement, but to lay the matter before him, if they have any reasonable ground for believing it to be a proper one for his attention.

For the purpose of discouraging idle or useless inquiries, and to pay the cost of this advertisement, of postage and stationery, of clerical service in briefing, noting, and answering inquiries, of traveling

PREFACE.

THIS manual is intended to show, in plain and compact form, the patronage, working-organization, and business of the Federal Government, and the means by which any deserving and capable aspirant for public employment may hope to share therein.

The public business of the United States is largely transacted by officers, agents, and employees, selected and patronized by the influential members of the political party in charge of the government for the time being, and their tenure of office is practically dependent upon the continued ascendency of that party, and a continuance of the influence and patronage that led to their selection.

There are certain formal acts of procedure necessary to be done in making the political or other influence of an aspirant for office available, and these acts are sufficiently described and illustrated herein.

This volume is intended to be practically complete within the scope indicated by its title, and any omissions observed in it will probably be such as are purposely made because they are of no practical service to the readers of the book. But any reader desiring further or more particular information on any subject treated herein, or upon any subject not mentioned at all, will be interested in the advertisement of the Bureau of Information which fronts this preface.

The steady growth of the business and working force of the Federal government, and the practical contentment of the people with the existing system of bestowing and exercising the public employments, create a genuine demand for information of the character herein given, while, at the same time, the publication of such intelligence not only brings the knowledge of the opportunity for such employment to large numbers of uninformed persons, but increases, in some degree, the probability of the public service being well performed.

GENERAL DESCRIPTION OF FEDERAL OFFICES.

The patronage of the general government consists of a multitude of offices and employments pertaining to the three great departments of government—the Legislative, the Executive, and the Judicial.

The legislative patronage consists in the administrative offices, clerkships, messengerships, and other superior and inferior employments necessary to the service of the Senate, the House of Representatives, and the two Houses sitting together as the Congress. These offices and employments are all exercised at the seat of government.

The executive patronage (except the few offices connected with the President's household) is distributed among and supervised by the seven great departments of State, Treasury, War, Navy, Post Office, Interior, and Justice, and the inferior department of Agriculture, and these executive offices and employments are exercised partly at the seat of government, partly in the several States and Territories, and partly abroad.

The chief offices under the State Department are those of ministers and consuls in foreign countries. The more numerous offices under the Treasury Department are the customs and internal revenue services; those under the War Department, the commissioned and civil forces of the army and its stations; those under the Navy Department, the commissioned and civil forces of the navy, its yards and stations, and the commissioned force of the Marine Corps; those under the Post Office Department, the postmasterships, railway mail and contract services; those under the Interior Department, the Indian, land, pension, and Territorial services; and those under the Department of Justice, the attorneyships and marshalships of the several judicial districts, and the judiciary of the Territories.

Each of the executive departments has its staff of bureau officers, clerks, messengers, and laborers, employed at the seat of government, and there are many other special services, pertaining to one or the other of them, which will be particularly mentioned in their appropriate places hereafter.

The judicial patronage consists in the clerkships and commissionerships of the several courts of the United States, with such occasional patronage as is incident to the selection of receivers, referees, commissioners to take testimony, and other temporary officers needful to the conduct of causes depending in said courts.

The manner in which the offices and employments constituting the Federal patronage shall be filled, vacated, and exercised, is the mooted point which is suggested rather than expressed by the familiar phrase—"Civil Service Reform." At the present time, the Federal judges and the commissioned officers of the army, navy, and marine corps, hold their offices during life or good behavior, while nearly all the rest are filled and vacated at the pleasure of the appointing power. The great number, varied character and wide distribution of these offices have made the appointing power virtually dependent upon the members of the two Houses of Congress for advice and assistance in filling and vacating them; and this dependence has in course of time, and with the constant growth of the patronage, resulted in giving the members of Congress practical control of the patronage in their respective districts. But in order that the moral or active influence of office-holders may not be thrown against the political party in charge of the government, such control is withheld from members of Congress in opposition, and given to the managers of the administration party in the States where the offices are exercised.

With respect to the offices exercisable at the seat of government, the policy of the government from the earliest times has been to distribute them as equally as may be amongst the several States; and in consequence of this policy it happens that members of the Houses of Congress in sympathy with the administration, are usually permitted to influence such appointments, and they naturally favor those whom they know and associate with in the political circles wherein their own lives and activities are spent.

The proposed reform consists in giving the original selection of public officers and employees to permanent and independent tribunals, commissions or officers, and opening to the novice a lifelong career as a civil officer, with its ascending scale of honors and emoluments, free of all control and influence by political parties or politicians. This suggested change has not thus far met with a great amount of active support, mainly for the reason that the public service has been fairly well performed, while the offices have been habitually filled by men of respectable character and attainments; so that in the absence of any great or practical evil, the people at large are indifferent to, and somewhat afraid of, the proposed new system. Under the existing system there are many cases of life tenure of a practical kind, as where the office cannot be properly discharged without long familiarity with, and training in, its duties.

Who May Obtain Office.

The President is empowered to prescribe regulations for the admission of persons to the civil service; but no regulations of general application are in force. In their absence, any person who believes that he can satisfy the appointing power of his fitness and ability for general or particular employment, may lawfully and hopefully apply for such employment. He should show that he is a person of good repute in his community, and that his physical and mental qualifications are adapted to a satisfactory discharge of public duty.

The great mass of public employments neither require nor call for special preparatory training, but in the departments at Washington persons appointed to clerical offices are always required to pass an examination into their general capacity for clerical work, and in such isolated and temporary instances as the Interior Department, and the New York custom house at the present time, the examinations for the inferior clerkships are competitive.

The following specimen list of questions asked at a competitive examination will be found interesting, and possibly useful, to aspirants for clerical positions:

1. Write a letter addressed to the Secretary of the Interior, giving age, birthplace, previous occupation, and present legal residence.

2. Place the following figures on a separate sheet, and add the same:

5	7	9	4	3	6	7
4	3	8	9	6	4	5
7	9	6	7	3	2	9
6	4	8	9	5	7	5
3	8	7	6	9	4	5
8	3	6	5	4	3	9
4	7	3	7	8	5	4

Correct the following examples of false syntax:

1. To these precepts are subjoined a copious selection of rules

2. The money was divided between the five principal thieves.

3. A republican form of government is one where powers and duties of its officers are limited by a constitution.

4. The board or I are wrong.

5. His being at an enmity with Cæsar and Antony was the cause of perpetual discord.

6. With this booty he made off to a distant part of the country, where he had reason to believe that neither he nor his master were known.

7. Its early monuments consists almost wholly of laws beginning with the fourteenth century.

8. Which of the two is the eldest.

9. "Nor grew it white in a single night,
As men's have grown from sudden fears."

10. The number of accounts in the two quarters were very large.

1. Give the value of a greenback dollar with gold quoted at 137.

2. What is the interest of $26.25 for 2 years, 8 months, at 7 per cent?

3. What amount of pension will be paid to a pensioner entitled to 16½ dollars per month, for 2 years, 7 months, and 23 days.

4. At the rate of $1400 per annum, what amount should be paid to a clerk for 19 days?

5. If $100 will gain $6 in 12 months, what will $800 gain in 28 months?

6. Reduce 2-4 to a decimal.

7. Reduce 7-15 to a decimal.

8. What is the sum of 5-6, 3-8. and 7-16?

9. From 3-16 take 7-9.

Correct words you think misspelled in the following: Seperate; quantitys; shiping; supersede; conceed; commisary; average; merchantible; beleif; theiving.

1. Give the names of the original thirteen States.

2. Give the name of the State last admitted into the Union.

3. Give the number and titles of the Cabinet Ministers.

4. In what manner and for what length of time are Senators and Representatives elected?

5. How many judges compose the Supreme Court of the United States?

6. Who is Commander-in-Chief of the military and naval forces of the United States?

7. How many amendments to the Constitution of the United States have been adopted?

8. Define the general powers of Congress as prescribed by the Constitution.

9. What are the co-ordinate branches of the general Government?

10. What are the powers of the two Houses of Congress in relation to bills for revenue?

The above were only questions asked at one examination. The following twenty questions were asked at two other examinations. They are given to show the simple character of questions calling for anything in the way of general information:

1. What are the co-ordinate branches of the General Government, and the functions of each?
2. What are the principal offices and bureaus of the Department of the Interior?
3. What is a section of land, and how subdivided under the United States surveys?
4. What is a Congressional township?
5. Under what authority are the public lands disposed of?
6. What are the powers of the President under the Constitution?
7. What principal rivers of the United States flow into the Atlantic?
8. What are the principal ranges of mountains of the United States, and where situated?
9. When was President Jackson inaugurated, and how long did he serve?
10. What States have been formed from the territory acquired from Mexico?
1. How many and what States formed the "confederation" prior to the adoption of the Constitution?
2. At what age is a man qualified to become a member of Congress?
3. Who is Commander-in-Chief of the military and naval forces of the United States?
4. What States formed the so-called "Confederate States of America?"
5. How many amendments to the Constitution of the United States have been adopted?
6. When may a State have more Senators than Representatives in Congress?
7. Define the general powers of Congress as prescribed by the Constitution?
8. Name the Territories of the United States?
9. What are the co-ordinate branches of the General Government?
10. What are the powers of the two Houses of Congress?

Preference is required by law to be given to persons discharged from the military or naval service by reason of wounds or sickness, and any applicant belonging to this class should persistently urge this qualification upon those whom he addresses.

Women may be as freely appointed as men to public employments which they can satisfactorily fill, and may receive like pay for like service; but, as matter of fact, the range of suitable employments for them is comparatively limited.

How to Make Application.

The earliest care of an applicant for public employment should be the preparation of his papers. First, he should compose and write out his application, in the form of a letter to the person having the power of appointment. He should state, as closely as he can, the particular office or the kind of employment desired. If he intends to advocate the displacement of a person in possession of the desired office, he should give his reasons for that person's removal, and they should be such as he would not object to have that person see or hear. He should then state his age, residence, nativity, occupation, physical condition, educational qualifications, former public employments, special qualifications for the desired employment, if any, and what claims he has on the nation, his political party, the particular branch of the service to which he is applying, and the person to whom his letter is addressed. He should lastly mention the names, addresses, and other particulars of public men, lawyers, ministers, merchants, Federal and State officers, and other leading citizens, to whom he refers for proof of good character and general capacity. The following is given as a model for an application:

"SALUDA, OHIO, May 15, 1880.

"TO THE HONORABLE POSTMASTER-GENERAL:

"SIR:—I respectfully apply for an appointment as a railway post-office clerk or mail route agent. I am 37 years of age, a native of Canada naturalized in the United States, a resident of Saluda, Scott county, Ohio, a machinist by occupation, of sound health and body, and the possessor of a public school and academic education. I was for two years, in 1872 and 1873, an assorting clerk in the Cincinnati post-office, and had much experience in the handling of mail matter, and acquired much knowledge of the names and locations of post-offices in the Middle and Western States.

"I served for two and a half years as a private and non-commissioned officer in the 65th Ohio Volunteers, and was severely wounded in action at Atlanta. I have been for ten years an active member of the Republican party in this close Congressional District, and have always done all that could honorably be done to promote its success.

"I beg to refer to General Slote, the Representative from this District, Postmaster Sperry, County Judge James Robertson, the Rev. Dr. Jacob Paulding, Mr. Thomas Marshall, merchant, Lawyer John Dodd, Dr. Ephraim Squires, and many other prominent citizens of Saluda, for evidence of my character and fitness for an appointment in the postal service. Your obedient servant,

"CHARLES T. CAMPBELL."

The applicant should next proceed to obtain letters of recommendation from the leading citizens of his neighborhood, without regard to their political affiliations. He should endeavor to get a separate, autograph letter from each indorser, couched in the writer's own language, and he should always suggest to the writer to put his recommendation in such a way as to show upon its face that he means what he says. The appointing officers at Washington are never much impressed by a circular letter of recommendation, apparently drawn up by the applicant or a friend, and passed about for signature, and the frequent practice of several persons writing and signing the phrase "I concur" beneath a preceding recommendation should be avoided. The applicant should add, in his own hand, to the signature appended to each letter of recommendation, such brief note of the writer's local position and standing as will enable the appointing power to understand the true value of the recommendation.

When the formal application and recommendations are ready, the applicant should next exert himself to interest his Representative in Congress in his application. If they are not in political accord, these efforts should be confined to convincing the Representative that the appointment would be popular with and give real satisfaction to the better class of people in the community, and especially to the independent voters whose opinions and good-will require conciliation. If they are in political accord, the value of the past and future services of the applicant to the party should be impressed upon the Representative by letter and speech from the applicant himself, and from everybody whom he can persuade to write or speak to the Representative in his behalf. The Senators from the applicant's State should also be enlisted in the same way if possible, but they must not be relied upon as much as the Representative. If neither the Representative nor the appointing authority belong to the same political party as the applicant, the latter must trust to other than political influences or aids if he venture to try or to hope for a place at all.

When the applicant succeeds in getting the Representative, or such other political leader as he is obliged to depend upon, interested in his case and satisfied of his good repute and ability, he should see to it that his papers are mailed, or presented, to the appointing officers, in order that they may be properly recorded and filed, and so made accessible at any time. Thenceforward, for a definite time (say a short month), he should devote his whole surplus of time and energy to keeping his personal and political friends at work upon his case, writing or speaking to anybody and everybody likely to be of any service, and always acting upon the theory that everybody, no matter how much interested, apparently, in his case, forgets all about it as soon as he is out of sight or hearing every time.

If no progress is made in the definite time laid down in advance, the applicant should abandon his efforts long enough to enable his friends and backers to get over fatigue and doubtfulness, and then begin afresh.

The same general course of procedure should be followed in the pursuit of the more temporary and inferior public employments, or of those where the appointing or nominating authority is nearer at home, and more accessible to personal importunity and local influence.

The applicant should never feel sure of appointment till appointed, nor should ever fear that he is saying or doing too much himself, or that others are doing or saying too much for him, or that any help he can get from any quarter, of any kind, will be useless. However numerous and warm his friends may be, none will ever feel so much interested as himself in his success, and the more active and persistent he is in availing himself of the services and influence of others, the more anxious they will be to regain their own peace by getting him placed as speedily as possible. First, an applicant should be sure in his own mind that he really needs or desires a public employment; next, he must be satisfied that the application and recommendations are such as would secure him a position if there were more places than applicants; and, lastly, he must feel, and act upon the feeling, that he is engaged in a desperate struggle with a great number of competitors for the same place, all of them as eager, and most of them as enterprising, as himself. He should also be mindful of the fact that unsystematic and unskillful activity is likely to waste the time and wear out the spirits of himself and his friends.

It is always useful for an applicant, who cannot himself attend and wait upon the appointing officer, to have some friend or correspondent to make a business of frequently visiting the appointing-office and (without attempting to exert direct influence) keep watch and track of the applicant's interest amid the constantly-changing circumstances that affect it.

An applicant for office should not apply for employment generally if he can avoid it; but his chances are always much better when he is able to point out and apply for the particular employment, or kind or class of employment, that he seeks. On the other hand, he should not frame his application, or his written or oral communications so absolutely as to discourage others from seeking for or offering to him a different office from the one designated by himself.

Modesty of speech and behavior should always be displayed by an applicant for office, but he must be particular to set out and refer to every claim or inducement likely to be of direct or indirect service, and he should not shrink from applying for the highest appointment for which he can secure honest and sincere recommendations and assistance. A frequent qualification and motive for appointing a person to an inferior office is the contest he has made, and the social and political backing he has received, for an important place.

In respect to offices not exercised in the incumbent's own State, it has come to be almost a fixed rule that citizens of the same State are to succeed each other indefinitely in them, so that one qualification for such an office is that the applicant is from the same State as the late or present incumbent.

It is impossible to give separate or special advice to each reader of this manual concerning the particular office or kind of employment for which he should make application. He should consider his own age, bodily condition, intellectual attainments, tastes, habits, past experience, social and political rank, and influence in the community and his party, and, having informed himself, from this work and any other source of information at command, as to how many and what kinds of appointments he could possibly get, should select those which seem to hold out the best prospects of success or satisfaction, and frame his application and recommendations accordingly. All public employments have, to a greater or lesser extent, the common advantages of higher pay, easier labor and surer returns than private employments, and it is just these advantages that tempt men to forego the manliness, independence, and opportunities of private life; so that, if they did not exist, the government could get no service at all, except in the higher grades, where the mere honor of holding office would be a sufficient inducement to the more opulent classes of the people.

By Whom Appointments are Made.

Every Federal employment is exercised under the legislative, the executive, or the judicial department of government.

In the legislative department, the Secretary and other principal officers of the Senate are chosen by a caucus of the Senators belonging to the political majority. The Secretary appoints the clerical and laboring force of his office; the Sergeant-at-Arms appoints the door-keepers, mail and document employees, and the general working force; and the chairmen of committees severally appoint the committee clerks.

The Clerk and other principal officers of the House of Representatives are chosen by a caucus of the political majority. The Speaker appoints the reporters; the Clerk appoints the clerks and messengers; the Door-keeper appoints the door-keepers, document employees and general working force; the Architect appoints the heating and ventilating force; the Sergeants-at-Arms of Senate and House, together with the Architect, appoint the Capitol policemen; and the chairmen of committees severally appoint the committee clerks.

In the Executive Department the President appoints the heads of the seven great departments and the Department of Agriculture; the heads of Departments appoint the clerks and messengers in their several departments, and virtually appoint the important officers, whether at Washington or elsewhere, whose offices are superintended by their respective departments; but in these cases the President may be addressed, and solicited, and visited, with perfect propriety, as well as the heads of departments.

Applicants for diplomatic and consular offices must look to the Secretary of State; applicants desiring to be heads of bureaus of the Treasury, or principal customs, Internal Revenue, depositary, mint, or steamboat-inspection or revenue marine officers, must look to the Secretary of the Treasury; civilians desiring to be cadets, second lieutenants, paymasters, or post-traders in the army, must look to the Secretary of War; applicants for cadetships, or pay or medical appointments in the navy, or lieutenantcies of marines, must look to the Secretary of the Navy; applicants for Territorial, Indian, patent office, and public land employments, must look to the Secretary of the Interior; applicants for important places in the postal service, must look to the Postmaster-General; applicants for judicial and law offices, must look to the Attorney-General; and applicants for occasional technical and scientific employment in connection with agriculture, must look to the Commissioner of Agriculture.

The Public Printer appoints the printers, binders, and skilled and unskilled workmen and laborers, in the Government Printing Office. The Sergeants-at-Arms of Congress have much occasional employment for deputies, and there are many temporary appointments made by the other appointing officers of Congress, and the same may be said of the heads of the Executive departments and bureaus. Consuls have the nomination of numerous assistants and agents. The Comptroller of the Currency appoints the examiners of national banks.

The Surgeon-General of Marine Hospitals has the practical selection of assistant surgeons in that service. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue appoints the revenue agents. The Collectors of Internal Revenue nominate their deputies, clerks, store-keepers, and gaugers. The Collectors, Naval Officers, Surveyors, and Appraisers of Customs, nominate their clerks and other subordinates. The Marine Hospital Surgeons nominate their subordinates. The Superintendents of Construction select the foremen and workmen on buildings under construction. The Quartermasters, Commissaries, Paymasters, Engineers, Ordnance Officers, and Store-keepers of the army, employ large numbers of clerks, superintendents, workmen, and laborers. The Surgeon-General selects a large part of the hospital stewards of the army. The Chief Signal Officer selects the weather observers. The Chiefs of Bureaus of the Navy Department have the virtual appointment of the boatswains, gunners, sailmakers, carpenters, and civilian surgeons of the navy. The Indian Agents choose the agency employees. Postmasters choose the clerks, letter-carriers, and local mail agents of their respective post offices. The General Superintendent of the Railway Mail Service selects the superintendents at the distributing offices.

In the judicial department, judges, attorneys and marshals are ap pointed by the President. Clerks of courts are appointed by the several judges, and these clerks select their deputy-clerks. The marshals appoint the deputy-marshals; the circuit courts appoint the United States Commissioners. The Commissioners of the District of Columbia appoint and employ large numbers of persons in various District services.

Tenure of Offices.

Most of the public employments are held at the will of the appointing power, and this will is very much governed by the wishes of the influential members of the administration party.

Judges of the Supreme, Circuit and District Courts, and of the Court of Claims and Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, and commissioned officers of the army, navy, and marine corps, hold office during good behavior. Judges of Territorial Courts, assistant treasurers, principal officers of customs and internal revenue, governors and secretaries of Territories, land officers, Indian agents, pension agents, postmasters of the first, second and third classes, district attorneys and marshals, cannot hold office for more than four years under the same commission.

Official Bonds.

As a general rule, officers having the receipt, custody, or disbursement of public money, or the custody or expenditure of public property, are required to give bond for the faithful performance of their trust. The bonds are so numerous and various for the several officers and classes of officers, that it is impracticable to set them out, but it will suffice to say that the amount is never in excess of the dignity and salary of the office, that the execution and approval of them are not matters of difficulty, and that they are no practical obstacle to any applicant worthy of recommendation or appointment.

Oaths of Office.

Every person appointed to office must take an oath of past loyalty and future allegiance to the United States government; or, if he cannot take the oath of past loyalty, he must take the modified oath of future and paramount allegiance to the Federal government.

There are additional oaths for officers appointed in the customs, postal and judicial service, relating to a faithful discharge of duty, and not necessary to be set out herein.

Customs and internal revenue officers are required to make oath that they have not received presents from importers or manufacturers each time that they draw their salaries.

Disabilities of Officers.

No officer can receive the salary of two offices for the same time.

Extra compensation for extra services is not allowable unless expressly authorized by law in any case.

No officer can prosecute or be interested in any claim against the United States, unless it be his own claim; nor can a departmental officer prosecute claims within two years after leaving the service.

No officer can take compensation for services in any matter wherein the United States are interested.

Officers must not demand or receive higher fees than allowed by law, nor take presents or gratuities from the public.

Officers connected with the branches of service to which such matters pertain, must not be interested in importing, navigation, banking, public funds, public lands, postal contracts, or Indian traffic.

Officers having the custody of public property or money, must not traffic or speculate in it.

Office-holders must not solicit or make contributions for presents to superiors, nor receive presents from subordinates.

The Federal Capital.

The post office address of the seat of government is "Washington, D. C.," and that is the station for which tickets should be taken upon all lines of travel to the national capital. The United States Capitol is the home of the Congress, the two Houses of which constitute the legislative branch of the Federal government. Numerous other buildings within the territorial limits of the capital accommodate the executive and judicial branches and the local government.

It is never absolutely necessary to know the personal name of a public officer. But the name of the holder of any office can be furnished by the publisher of this work, if desired. A communication addressed to him by the name of his office, will reach him as surely and speedily as though his baptismal and family names appeared upon the envelope. Nor is it necessary (though it is desirable) that the name of his office should be given with complete accuracy. It would be very difficult to name a public office in such a way as to confound or mislead the distributing clerks of the Washington post office.

It is not necessary that a correspondent should know certainly to what public officer his communication should be addressed. If he should happen to address himself to the wrong official, his letter would be referred to the right one immediately.

It is not necessary to find out whether a public officer is present or absent from the capital before addressing him on business, as a business communication will receive proper attention in either case.

It is not necessary to enclose postage stamps in letters to public officers which require answers; but it is necessary to give a sufficient address to which an answer can be sent, without trusting to the postmark upon the envelope.

A single letter to a public officer should never refer to more than a single matter of business, but as many separate letters as can be put therein may be enclosed in one envelope, if all are intended for the same officer.

For the purpose of indicating in a general way the public officer to whom a letter upon any particular subject may properly be addressed, the following statement of the distribution of business amongst the several heads of executive departments at the seat of government is furnished :

The Secretary of State has charge of the intercourse between the United States and foreign nations, the issuing of passports, and the publication and sale to the public of the laws enacted by the Congress.

The Secretary of the Treasury has general charge of the finances, commerce and navigation of the United States, such as collecting, keeping and disbursing the revenue, managing the public debt, coining money and issuing paper currencies, erecting public buildings, administering the tariff on imports and the coasting laws, and supervising the lighthouse, life-saving, coast survey, revenue marine, and marine hospital services.

The Secretary of War has the general supervision of recruiting, supplying, paying, and moving the army; of erecting, arming, and maintaining sea-coast defenses, improving rivers and harbors, forecasting the weather for the benefit of navigation and agriculture, and the custody of the military archives.

The Secretary of the Navy has the general charge of the vessels, yards, stations, supplies, and force of the navy, and of the observatory and hydrographic establishment.

The Secretary of the Interior has general supervision of patents, pensions, public lands, Indians, education, the census, government publications, territorial governments, of certain branches of the local government at the capital, and of certain local institutions of benevolence, learning or correction.

The Postmaster-General has the supervision of the domestic and foreign mail and money-order services, and the making of postal treaties with foreign powers.

The Attorney-General (head of the Department of Justice) is the attorney and counsellor-at-law for the executive branch of the government, and has a general supervision over the district attorneys and marshals of the United States.

The Commissioner of Agriculture collects and distributes useful information relating to agriculture, experiments upon seeds and plants, and investigates the nature and habits of insects and fungoid growths injurious to agriculture.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The following branches of service have their headquarters and supervising officers at Washington, and are under the general direction of the Secretary of the Treasury; but their forces are mainly stationed or employed elsewhere:

COAST AND GEODETIC SURVEY.

Superintendent	$6,000
Assistant	4,200
Consulting Geometer	4,000
Disbursing Agent	2,500

There are habitually employed upwards of 50 so-called assistants, with salaries varying from $3,750 to $1,100, and about 100 clerks, computers, draughtsmen, printers, engravers, etc., at compensations varying from $2,000 per year down to $1.50 per day.

REVENUE MARINE SERVICE.

34 Captains	$2,500
34 First Lieutenants	1,800

22 Third Lieutenants	1,200
12 Cadets	900
23 Chief Engineers	1,800
18 Assistants	1,500
27 Assistants	1,200

This service consists of a disciplined naval force employed, under the Treasury Department, in the prevention of smuggling, and in assisting vessels in distress, on the sea-coasts and great lakes. Civilians are only appointed to the inferior grades of cadet or second assistant engineer, all higher grades being attained by promotion. Candidates for these two grades must possess special qualifications as to age, physical condition, and intellectual attainments (with certain technical knowledge and training in the engineer candidates) or they will not be admitted. The force grows with the necessities of the service. There are openings for qualified mariners as boatswains, carpenters, quartermasters, etc.

64 Messengers, Watchmen, and Firemen	720
50 Laborers	660
8 Charwomen	180

Part of the above enumerated force is supported by appropriations made in bulk for specific objects, and is subject to variation in number and compensation. The remaining force of the War Department consists of about 125 private physicians employed at Washington and various military posts at a compensation of $100 per month, with quarters and fuel; about 185 hospital stewards, with pay of from $20 to $35 per month, with rations, quarters, fuel, and clothing; about 50 paymaster's clerks, at $1,200 per year; about 90 national cemetery keepers, paid from $720 to $900 per year, with residences; about 450 weather observers in the Signal Corps, from $25 to $100 per month, with allowances; a considerable force of clerks, draughtsmen, civil engineers, skilled workmen, etc., employed at various rates upon the public buildings, grounds, and works, at the seat of government and elsewhere, under charge of the Engineer Bureau, including forts and river and harbor improvements; about 500 employees of all sorts at armories and arsenals; about 450 clerks, superintendents, and other employees, at rates from $40 to $200 per month, engaged in moving the army and its supplies by land and water, and taking care of its barracks, storehouses and clothing, and about 100 similar employees engaged upon the army subsistence supplies. The patronage of this Department is very intricate, varying, and flexible. In the army itself, civilians are admitted to the grades of cadet, second lieutenant, assistant surgeon, chaplain, and paymaster, with life tenure after admission.

The remaining civil force of the Navy Department consists of the variable staffs of clerks, draughtsmen, mechanical foremen, and skilled and unskilled operatives at the several yards and stations of the Navy. Admissions of civilians to the commissioned force are restricted to naval-cadets, cadet-engineers, assistant engineers, second lieutenants of marines, assistant surgeons, assistant paymasters, chaplains, and naval constructors, and to professors of mathematics, for the scientific branches of the service. Boatswains, gunners, sailmakers and carpenters, are also taken from civil life.

The force of the Post Office Department is very flexible, both as to numbers and compensations. The foregoing lists of the inspection and railway mail service are approximations to the present number and pay, but the tendency is towards steady growth in both, and there are always considerable numbers of so-called temporary agents and clerks in service. There are at present some 130 local mail agents, with salaries from $100 to $1,800 per year, and a larger number of mail route messengers, with salaries from $100 to $880 per year, Great numbers of the 5,600 or 5,700 mail contracts might properly be classed under the head of patronage of the Department.

The temporary and occasional patronage of this Department is of limited extent, and consists chiefly in the employment of special counsel to aid in prosecuting or defending suits by or against the United States, and of special agents to inspect, investigate, and report upon the conduct of business by the clerks, marshals, and attorneys of the Federal courts throughout the country. These special employees are well paid, and the employment in some cases is equivalent to a permanent office.

DIPLOMATIC AND CONSULAR OFFICES.

The pay of a diplomatic or consular officer is calculated from the time when he begins to receive his instructions; but not more than thirty days time is allowed to this business, and he must take the most direct route to his station. On his return home, time is allowed for the return journey by the most direct route, unless he has resigned, or been recalled, because of official misconduct.

Diplomatic and consular officers must not be absent from their posts more than ten days in one year, without leave obtained from the President, and then only for sixty days, not including the time spent in the round journey if the officer visits his home.

Allowances for clerical service are made to a considerable number of the larger consulates.

The thirteen consular clerks hold office during good behavior after appointment.

The consular offices compensated only by fees, are usually sought and filled by persons who desire to hold the offices and live at the stations for purposes of business, health, or pleasure, and not for the emoluments of the offices themselves.

FEDERAL OFFICES AND EMPLOYMENTS IN EACH STATE AND TERRITORY.

REMARKS.

Circuit judges, revenue and treasury agents, army physicians, quartermaster, commissary, medical and pay clerks, superintendents of railway mails, and post-office inspectors, are not unalterably fixed to the cities or States to which they are assigned in the following pages, so that changes among them are possible from time to time, both in number and location.

There are 2,400 route agents and postal clerks in the railway mail service, at salaries from $900 to $1400, and 240 mail-route messengers in the same service, at salaries from $320 to $800, and this great force is taken from and employed in every State in the Union; but it is not possible to show the numbers and routes in each State separately.

The post-office, customs, judicial, public land, light-house, life-saving, marine hospital and steamboat inspection services are constantly growing in numbers, stations and salaries; the other services are stationary, and some have a tendency to decrease.

The arsenals and navy-yards are mentioned in their proper places, but no attempt is made to give numbers, grades and wages of employees, because of the temporary and fluctuating character of employments therein.

Post-offices which yield a less compensation than $500 to their post-masters are not mentioned, nor are the number and salaries of clerks in small post-offices, employing but a few clerks at inferior salaries, for the double reason that such information about petty offices is readily obtained on the spot and nobody but those residing on the spot is interested in the information.

Large numbers of persons derive a revenue from the United States as contractors for carrying the mails, or constructing public buildings, or improving rivers and harbors, or furnishing or transporting army and Indian supplies, or supplying navy yards with materials or stores, or surveying public lands; but these services are professedly open to and regulated by public competition, and are too fluctuating to be scheduled or classified in this work.

Appointments in the larger custom-houses and post-offices are not confined to residents in the immediate locality of such establishments, but are open to the whole State.

APPENDIX.

National Democratic Platform, 1880.

THE Democrats of the United States, in convention assembled, declare :—

First—We pledge ourselves anew to the constitutional doctrines and traditions of the Democratic party, as illustrated by the teaching and example of a long line of Democratic statesmen and patriots, and embodied in the platform of the last National Convention of the party.

Second—Opposition to centralizationism and to that dangerous spirit of encroachment which tends to consolidate the powers of all the departments in one, and thus to create, whatever be the forms of government, a real despotism. No sumptuary laws; separation of Church and State, for the good of each; common schools fostered and protected.

Third—Home rule; honest money, consisting of gold and silver, and paper convertible to coin on demand. The strict maintenance of the public faith, State and national, and a tariff for revenue only.

Fourth—The subordination of the military to the civil power, and a general and thorough reform of the civil service.

Fifth—The right of a free ballot is the right preservative of all rights, and must and shall be maintained in every part of the United States.

Sixth—The existing administration is the representative of conspiracy only, and its claim of right to surround ballot boxes with troops and deputy marshals to intimidate and obstruct the electors, and the unprecedented use of the veto to maintain its corrupt and despotic power, insult the people and imperil their institutions.

Seventh—The great fraud of 1876–77, by which, upon a false count of the electoral votes of two States, the candidate defeated at the polls was declared to be President, and for the first time in American history the will of the people was set aside under a threat of military violence, struck a deadly blow at our system of representative government. The Democratic party, to preserve the country from the horrors of a civil war, submitted for the time, in firm and patriotic faith that the people would punish this crime in 1880. This issue precedes and dwarfs every other. It imposes a more sacred duty upon the people of the Union than was ever addressed to the conscience of a nation of freemen.

Eighth—We execrate the course of this administration in making places in the civil service a reward for political crime, and demand a reform by statute which shall make it forever impossible for the defeated candidate to bribe his way to the seat of a usurper by billeting villains upon the people.

Ninth—The resolution of Samuel J. Tilden not again to be a candidate for the exalted place to which he was elected by a majority of his countrymen, and from which he was excluded by the leaders of the Republican party, is received by the Democrats of the United States with sensibility, and they declare their confidence in his wisdom, patriotism and integrity, unshaken by the assaults of a common enemy, and they further assure him that he is followed into the retirement he has chosen for himself by the sympathy and respect of his fellow citizens, who regard him as one who, by elevating the standards of public morality, and adorning and purifying the public service, merits the lasting gratitude of his country and his party.

Tenth—Free ships and a living chance for American commerce on the seas and on the land. No discrimination in favor of transportation lines, corporations or monopolies.

Eleventh—Amendment of the Burlingame treaty. No more Chinese immigration, except for travel, education and foreign commerce, and therein carefully guarded.

Twelfth—Public money and public credit for public purposes solely, and public land for actual settlers.

Thirteenth—The Democratic party is the friend of labor and the laboring man, and pledges itself to protect him alike against the cormorants and the commune.

Fourteenth—We congratulate the country upon the honesty and thrift of a Democratic Congress, which has reduced the public expenditure $40,000,000 a year; upon the continuation of prosperity at home and the national honor abroad, and above all upon the promise of such a change in the administration of the government as shall insure us genuine and lasting reform in every department of the public service.

National Republican Platform, 1880.

THE Republican party, in National Convention assembled, at the end of twenty years since the federal government was first committed to its charge, submits to the people of the United States this brief report of its administration. It suppressed a rebellion which had armed nearly a million of men to subvert the national authority. It reconstructed the union of the States, with freedom instead of slavery as its corner-stone. It transformed 4,000,000 of human beings from the likeness of things to the rank of citizens. It relieved Congress from the infamous work of hunting fugitive slaves, and charged it to see that slavery does not exist. It has raised the value of our paper currency from thirty-eight per cent. to the par of gold. It has restored upon a solid basis payment in coin for all the national obligations, and has given us a currency absolutely good and equal in every part of our extended country. It has lifted the credit of the nation from the point where six per cent. bonds sold at eighty-six cents, to that where four per cent. bonds are eagerly sought at a premium. Under its administration railways have increased from 31,000 miles in 1860, to more than 82,000 miles in 1879. Our foreign trade has increased from $700,000,000 to $1,150,000,000 in the same time, and our exports, which were $20,000,000 less than our imports in 1860, were $264,000,000 more than our imports in 1879. Without resorting to loans, it has since the war closed defrayed the ordinary expenses of government, besides the accruing interest of the public debt, and has annually disbursed more than $30,000,000 for soldiers' pensions. It has paid $888,000,000 of the public debt, and by refunding the balance at lower rates, has reduced the annual interest charge from nearly $151,000,000 to less than $89,000,000. All the industries of the country have revived, labor is in demand, wages have increased, and throughout the entire country there is evidence of a coming prosperity greater than we have ever enjoyed.

Upon this record the Republican party asks for the continued confidence and support of the people, and this convention submits for their approval the following statements of the principles and purposes which will continue to guide and inspire its efforts:

First—We affirm that the work of the last twenty-one years has been such as to commend itself to the favor of the nation, and that the fruits of the costly victories which we have achieved through immense difficulties should be preserved; that the peace regained should be cherished; that the dissevered Union now happily restored should be perpetuated, and that the liberties secured to this generation should be transmitted undiminished to future generations; that the order established and the credit acquired should never be impaired; that the pensions promised should be extinguished by the full payment of every dollar thereof; that the reviving industries should be further promoted, and that the commerce, already so great, should be steadily encouraged.

Second—The Constitution of the United States is a supreme law, and not a mere contract; out of confederated States it made a sovereign nation. Some powers are denied to the nation, while others are denied to the States; but the boundary between the powers delegated and those reserved is to be determined by the national and not by the State tribunals.

Third—The work of popular education is one left to the care of the several States, but it is the duty of the national government to aid that work to the extent of its constitutional duty. The intelligence of the nation is but the aggregate of the intelligence in the several States, and the destiny of the nation must be guided, not by the genius of any one State, but by the average genius of all.

Fourth—The Constitution wisely forbids Congress to make any law respecting an establishment of religion, but it is idle to hope that the nation can be protected against the influence of sectarianism while each State is exposed to its domination. We therefore recommend that the Constitution be so amended as to lay the same prohibition upon the Legislature of each State, and to forbid the appropriation of public funds to the support of sectarian schools.

Fifth—We affirm the belief avowed in 1876, that the duties levied for the purpose of revenue should so discriminate as to favor American labor; that no further grant of the public domain should be made to any railway or other corporation; that slavery having perished in the States, its twin barbarity, polygamy, must die in the Territories; that everywhere the protection accorded to the citizens of American birth must be secured to citizens by American adoption; and that we esteem it the duty of Congress to develop and improve our water courses and harbors, but insist that further subsidies to private persons or corporations must cease; that the obligations of the Republic to the men who preserved its integrity in the hour of battle are undiminished by the lapse of the fifteen years since their final victory—to do them perpetual honor is, and shall forever be, the grateful privilege and sacred duty of the American people.

Sixth—Since the authority to regulate immigration and intercourse between the United States and foreign nations rests with Congress, or with the United States and its treaty-making powers, the Republican party, regarding the unrestricted immigration of the Chinese as an evil of great magnitude, invoke the exercise of those powers to restrain and limit that immigration by the enactment of such just, humane and reasonable provisions as will produce that result.

Seventh—That the purity and patriotism which characterized the earlier career of Rutherford B. Hayes in peace and war, and which guided the thoughts of our immediate predecessors to him for a Presidential candidate, have continued to inspire him in his career as Chief Executive, and that history will accord to his administration the honors which are due to an efficient, just and courteous discharge of the public business, and will honor his interpositions between the people and proposed partisan laws.

Eighth—We charge upon the Democratic party the habitual sacrifice of patriotism and justice to a supreme and insatiable lust of office and patronage; that to obtain possession of the national and State governments and the control of place and position, they have obstructed all efforts to promote the purity and conserve the freedom of suffrage, and have devised fraudulent certifications and returns; have labored to unseat lawfully elected members of Congress, to secure at all hazards the vote of a majority of the States in the House of Representatives; have endeavored to occupy by force and fraud the places of trust given to others by the people of Maine, and rescued by the courageous action of Maine's patriotic sons; have by methods vicious in principle and tyrannical in practice attached partisan legislation to appropriation bills, upon whose passage the very movements of the government depend, and have crushed the rights of individuals; have advocated the principles and sought the favor of rebellion against the nation, and have endeavored to obliterate the sacred memory of the war, and to overcome its inestimably valuable results of nationality, personal freedom, and individual equality. The equal, steady and complete enforcement of the laws, and the protection of all our citizens in the enjoyment of all privileges and immunities guaranteed by the constitution, are the first duties of the nation.

The dangers of a "solid" South can only be averted by a faithful performance of every promise which the nation has made to the citizen. The execution of the laws and the punishment of those who violate them are the only safe methods by which an enduring peace can be secured and genuine prosperity established throughout the South. Whatever promises the nation makes the nation must perform, and the nation cannot with safety relegate this duty to the States. The "solid" South must be divided by the peaceful agencies of the ballot, and all opinions must there find free expression; and to this end the honest voter must be protected against terrorism, violence or fraud.

And we affirm it to be the duty and purpose of the Republican party to use every legitimate means to restore all the States of this Union to the most perfect harmony that may be practicable; and we submit it to the practical, sensible people of the United States to say whether it would not be dangerous to the dearest interests of our country at this time to surrender the administration of the national government to the party which seeks to overthrow the existing policy under which we are so prosperous, and thus bring distrust and confusion where there are now order, confidence and hope.

General Garfield's Letter of Acceptance.

MENTOR, O., July 10, 1880.—Dear Sir: On the evening of the 8th of June last I had the honor to receive from you, in the presence of the committee of which you were chairman, the official announcement that the Republican National Convention at Chicago had that day nominated me as their candidate for President of the United States. I accept the nomination with gratitude for the confidence it implies, and with a deep sense of the responsibilities it imposes. I cordially indorse the principles set forth in the platform adopted by the Convention. On nearly all the subjects of which it treats my opinions are on record among the published proceedings of Congress. I venture, however, to make special mention of some of the principal topics which are likely to become subjects of discussion.

Without reviewing the controversies which have been settled during the last twenty years, and with no purpose or wish to revive the passions of the late war, it should be said that, while Republicans fully recognize and will strenuously defend all the rights retained by the people and all the rights reserved to the States, they reject the pernicious doctrine of State supremacy, which so long crippled the functions of the National Government, and at one time brought the Union very near to destruction. They insist that the United States is a nation, with ample powers of self-preservation; that its constitution and the laws made in pursuance thereof "are the supreme law of the land;" that the right of the nation to determine the method by which its own Legislature shall be created cannot be surrendered without abdicating one of the fundamental powers of the government; that the national laws relating to the election of Representatives in Congress, shall neither be violated nor evaded; that every elector shall be permitted freely and without intimidation to cast his lawful vote at such election and have it honestly counted; and that the potency of his vote shall not be destroyed by the fraudulent vote of any other person. The best thoughts and energies of our people should be directed to those great questions of national well-being in which all have a common interest. Such efforts will the sooner restore to perfect peace those who were lately in arms against each other, for justice and good will will outlast passion. But it is certain that the wounds of the war cannot be completely healed, and the spirit of brotherhood cannot fully pervade the whole country, until every citizen, rich or poor, white or black, is secure in the free and equal enjoyment of every civil and political right guaranteed by the constitution and the laws. Wherever the enjoyment of these rights is not assured, discontent will prevail, immigration will cease, and the social and industrial forces will continue to be disturbed by the migration of labor and the consequent diminution of prosperity. The National Government should exercise all its constitutional authority to put an end to those evils, for all the people and all the States are members of one body, and no member can suffer without injury to all. The most serious evils which now afflict the South arise from the fact that there is not such freedom and toleration of political opinion and action that the minority party can exercise an effective and wholesome restraint upon the party in power. Without such restraint, party rule becomes tyrannical and corrupt. The prosperity which is made possible in the South by its great advantages of soil and climate will never be realized until every voter can freely and safely support any party he pleases.

Next in importance to freedom and justice is popular education without which neither justice nor freedom can be permanently maintained. Its interests are intrusted to the States and to the voluntary action of the people. Whatever help the nation can justly afford, should be generously given to aid the States in supporting common schools, but it would be unjust to our people and dangerous to our institutions to apply any portion of the revenues of the nation or of the States to the support of sectarian schools. The separation of the Church and the State in everything relating to taxation should be absolute.

On the subject of national finances my views have been so frequently and fully expressed that little is needed in the way of additional statement. The public debt is now so well secured, and the rate of annual interest has been so reduced by refunding, that rigid economy in expenditures, and the faithful application of our surplus revenues to the payment of the principal of the debt, will gradually but certainly free the people from its burdens and close with honor the financial chapter of the war. At the same time the government can provide for all its ordinary expenditure and discharge its sacred obligations to the soldiers of the Union and to the widows and orphans of those who fell in its defence. The resumption of specie payments, which the Republican party so courageously and successfully accomplished, has removed from the field of controversy many questions that long and seriously disturbed the credit of the government and the business of the country. Our paper currency is now as national as the flag, and resumption has not only made it everywhere equal to coin, but has brought into use our store of gold and silver. The circulating medium is more abundant than ever before, and we need only to maintain the equality of our dollars to insure to labor and capital a measure of value from the use of which no one can suffer loss. The great prosperity which the country is now enjoying should not be endangered by any violent changes or doubtful financial experiments.

In reference to our customs laws a policy should be pursued which will bring revenue to the Treasury, and will enable the labor and capital employed in our great industries to compete fairly in our own markets with the labor and capital of foreign production. We legislate for the people of the United States, not for the whole world, and it is our glory that the American laborer is more intelligent and better paid than his foreign competitor. Our country cannot be independent unless its people, with their abundant natural resources, possess the requisite skill at any time to clothe, arm and equip themselves for war, and in time of peace to produce all the necessary implements of labor. It was the manifest intention of the founders of the government to provide for the common defence, not by standing armies alone, but by raising among the people a greater army of artisans, whose intelligence and skill should powerfully contribute to the safety and glory of the nation. Fortunately for commerce, there is no longer any formidable opposition to appropriations for the improvement of our harbors and great navigable rivers, provided that the expenditures for that purpose are strictly limited to works of national importance. The Mississsppi river with its great tributaries is of such vital importance to so many millions of people that the safety of its navigation requires exceptional consideration. In order to secure to the nation the control of its waters, President Jefferson negotiated the purchase of a vast territory extending from the Gulf of Mexico to the Pacific Ocean. The wisdom of Congress should be invoked to devise some plan by which that great river shall cease to be a terror to those who dwell upon its banks, and by which its shipping may safely carry the industrial products of 25,000,000 of people. The interests of agriculture, which is the basis of our material prosperity, and in which seven-twelfths of our population are engaged, as well as the interest of manufactures and commerce, demand that the facilities for cheap transportation shall be increased by the use of water-courses.

The material interests of this country, the traditions of its settlement and the sentiments of our people, have led the government to offer the widest hospitality to emigrants who seek our shores for new and happier homes, willing to share the burdens as well as the benefits of our society, and intending that their posterity shall become an undistinguishable part of our population. The recent movement of the Chinese to the Pacific coast partakes but little of the qualities of such an emigration, either in its purposes or results. It is too much like an importation to be welcomed without restriction, too much like an invasion to be looked upon without solicitude. We cannot consent to allow any form of servile labor to be introduced among us under the guise of immigration. Recognizing the gravity of this subject, the present administration, supported by Congress, has sent to China a commission of distinguished citizens for the purpose of securing such a modification of the existing treaty as will prevent evils likely to arise from the present situation. It is confidently believed that these diplomatic negotiations will be successful, without the loss of commercial intercourse between the two powers, which promises a great increase of reciprocal trade and the enlargement of our markets. Should these efforts fail, it would be the duty of Congress to mitigate the evils already felt, and prevent their increase by such restrictions as, without violence or injustice, will place upon sure foundations the peace of our communities and the freedom and the dignity of labor.

The appointment of citizens to the various executive and judicial offices of the government, is perhaps the most difficult of all the duties which the Constitution has imposed upon the Executive. The convention wisely demands that Congress shall co-operate with the executive departments in placing the civil service on a better basis. Experience has proved that, with our frequent changes of administration, no system of reform can be made effective and permanent without the aid of legislation. Appointments to the military and naval service are so regulated by law and custom as to leave but little ground for complaint. It may not be wise to make similar regulations by law for the civil service. But without invading the authority or necessary discretion of the Executive, Congress should devise a method that will determine the tenure of office, and greatly reduce the uncertainty which makes that service so uncertain and unsatisfactory. Without depriving any officer of his rights as a citizen, the government should require him to discharge all his official duties with intelligence, efficiency and faithfulness. To select wisely from our vast population those who are best fitted for the many offices to be filled, requires an acquaintance far beyond the range of any one man. The Executive should therefore seek and receive the information and assistance of those whose knowledge of the communities in which the duties are to be performed best qualifies them to aid in making the wisest choice.

The doctrines announced by the Chicago Convention are not the temporary devices of a party to attract votes and carry elections.

They are deliberate convictions, resulting from a careful study of the spirit of our institutions, the events of our history, and the best impulses of our people. In my judgment these principles should control the legislation and administration of the government. In any event, they will guide my conduct until experience points out a better way. If elected, it will be my purpose to enforce strict obedience to the Constitution and the laws, and to promote as best I may the interest and honor of the whole country, relying for support upon the wisdom of Congress, the intelligence and patriotism of the people, and the favor of God.

With great respect, I am truly yours,

J. A. GARFIELD.

To Hon. GEORGE F. HOAR, Chairman of Committee.

General Hancock's Letter of Acceptance.

GOVERNOR'S ISLAND,
NEW YORK CITY, July 29, 1880.

GENTLEMEN:—I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of July 13, 1880, apprising me formally of my nomination to the office of President of the United States by the National Democratic Convention lately assembled in Cincinnati. I accept the nomination with grateful appreciation of the confidence reposed in me.

The principles enunciated by the Convention are those I have cherished in the past, and shall endeavor to maintain in the future.

The thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth amendments to the constitution of the United States, embodying the results of the war for the Union, are inviolable. If called to the Presidency I should deem it my duty to resist with all my power any attempt to impair or evade the full force and effect of the constitution, which in every article, section and amendment, is the supreme law of the land. The constitution forms the basis of the government of the United States. The powers granted by it to the legislative, executive and judicial departments, define and limit the authority of the general government. Powers not delegated to the United States by the constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, belong to the States respectively, or to the people. The general and State governments, each acting in its own sphere without trenching upon the lawful jurisdiction of the other, constitute the Union. This Union, comprising a general government with general powers and State governments with State powers, for purposes local to the States, is a policy, the foundations of which were laid in the profoundest wisdom.

This is the Union our fathers made, and which has been so respected abroad and so beneficent at home. Tried by blood and fire, it stands to-day a model form of free popular government—a political system which, rightly administered, has been and will continue to be the admiration of the world. May we not say nearly in the words of Washington—The unity of government, which constitutes us one people, is justly dear to us; it is the main pillar in the edifice of our real independence, the support of our peace, safety and prosperity, and of that liberty we so highly prize, and intend at every hazard to preserve.

But no form of government however carefully devised, no principles however sound, will protect the rights of the people unless its administration is faithful and efficient. It is a vital principle in our system that neither fraud nor force must be allowed to subvert the rights of the people. When fraud, violence or incompetence controls, the noblest constitutions and wisest laws are useless. The bayonet is not a fit instrument for collecting the votes of freemen. It is only by a full vote, free ballot, and fair count, that the people can rule in fact, as required by the theory of our government. Take this foundation away and the whole structure falls.

Public office is a trust, not a bounty bestowed upon the holder; no incompetent or dishonest persons should ever be intrusted with it, or if appointed, they should be promptly ejected. The basis of a substantial, practical civil service reform must first be established by the people in filling the elective offices; if they fix a high standard of qualifications for office and sternly reject the corrupt and incompetent, the result will be decisive in governing the action of the servants whom they intrust with appointing power.

The war for the Union was successfully closed more than fifteen years ago. All classes of our people must share alike in the blessings of the Union, and are equally concerned in its perpetuity and in the proper administration of public affairs. We are in a state of profound peace. Henceforth let it be our purpose to cultivate sentiments of friendship, and not of animosity, among our fellow citizens.

Our material interests, varied and progressive, demand our constant and united efforts. Assiduous and scrupulous care of the public credit, together with a wise and economical management of our governmental expenditures, should be maintained in order that labor may be lightly burdened, and that all persons may be protected in their right to the fruits of their own industry. The time has come to enjoy the substantial benefits of reconciliation. As one people we have common interests. Let us encourage the harmony and generous rivalry among our own industries which will revive our languishing merchant marine, extend our commerce with foreign nations, assist our merchants, manufacturers and producers to develop our vast natural resources, and increase the prosperity and happiness of our people.

If elected I shall, with the Divine favor, labor with what ability I possess to discharge my duties with fidelity, according to my convictions, and shall take care to protect and defend the Union, and to see that the laws be faithfully and equally executed in all parts of the country alike. I will assume the responsibility, fully sensible of the fact that to administer rightly the functions of government is to discharge the most sacred duty that can devolve upon an American citizen. I am, very respectfully, yours,

WINFIELD S. HANCOCK.

To the Hon. JOHN W. STEVENSON, President of the Convention; Hon. JOHN P. STOCKTON, Chairman, and others, of the Committee of the National Democratic Convention.

Analysis of the Platforms.

Democratic.	Republican.
Tariff for revenue only, and foreign-built ships, owned and officered by Americans, to become American vessels, with all their privileges.	Tariff to be so framed and applied as to prevent foreign competition with American industrial skill in any branch of manufacture; because, the more artisans, the stronger and wiser is the country.
Silver and paper-money, as well as gold.	Same; but equality of all three in value to be maintained
No deputy marshals or troops at elections; only State officers and sheriffs' forces.	Federal government to supervise election of Federal officers and representatives, by its own officers and forces.
Civil service to be reformed by voters rejecting improper candidates for elective offices.	Tenure of civil office to be made certain, though not necessarily permanent.

Congress to make laws preventing defeated candidates from corrupting returning officers by power of bestowing public offices for successful fraud.	Constitution to be amended to prohibit sectarian grants by States, and polygamy to be suppressed.
Legislation for protection of workingmen whenever needed.	Equal civil and political rights of everybody, everywhere, to be enforced by Federal government.
No Chinese to be admitted, except travelers, students and importers, and they under strict supervision.	Chinese immigration to be so restricted and regulated as to prevent degradation of health, morals, or manual labor.
Common schools to be fostered.	Same.
No subsidies of money, credit or lands, to monopolies or corporations.	Same.
"War amendments" of constitution to stand and be faithfully kept.	Same.
The legislation, administrative acts and policy of Republican party have tended to illegally and injuriously enlarge the jurisdiction and power of the general government, at the sacrifice of legal and wholesome "home rule." Long lease of power has made Republican party corrupt and aggressive.	Federal power and jurisdiction are limited in extent and object, but supreme as far as they go, and Federal courts must decide all controversies about them. Democratic party has habitually tried to prevent fair and free elections, and to defeat their results; has favored secession and rebellion, and tried to destroy legitimate and beneficial fruits of the war. Solidity of the South in support of Democratic polity is itself a grave danger.

The Electoral Vote.

The 38 States of the Union cast 369 electoral votes, of which 185 are necessary to a choice. The following columns exhibit the votes which, at the time of publication of this work, must be regarded as destined to go the respective ways indicated, and also the States which are still doubtful, and therefore constitute the battle-grounds of the campaign:

Florida and Virginia are sometimes ranked with the doubtful States by Republicans, and Maine and Pennsylvania by Democrats, but not in sincerity. The test of a really doubtful State—that is, the pouring into it of campaign funds, orators and documents—fails when applied to any but the five States ranked above as doubtful. The Republican organs agitate the subject of the Democratic quarrel over the State debt in Virginia for the purpose of cutting down some of the activity of their opponents in the five doubtful States, and the Democrats will contest Ohio because of the good effect upon the doubtful States, in November, of a reduced Republican majority there in the October election. The local Democrats will also contest Pennsylvania as a matter of loyalty to their Presidential candidate, who comes from that State.

Recent Votes in the Doubtful States.

California—Republican majority last Presidential election, 2,800. At election for Governor, September, 1879, Republican vote, 67,905, Democratic vote, 47,647, Workingman vote, 44,482. Workingmen's vote now divided, in unknown proportions, between Democrats and Greenbackers.

Connecticut—Democratic majority, last Presidential election, 2,900. At election for Governor, November, 1878, Republican vote, 48,867, Democratic vote, 46,385, Greenback vote, 8,314, Prohibition vote, 1,079, "Scattering" vote, 96.

Indiana—Democratic majority, last Presidential election, 5,515. Election of Secretary of State, October, 1878, Democratic vote, 194,770, Republican vote, 180,657, Greenback vote, 30,415.

New Jersey—Democratic majority, last Presidential election, 12,445. At election for Governor, autumn of 1877, Democratic vote, 97,837, Republican vote, 85,094, Greenback vote, 5,053, Prohibition vote, 1,438.

New York—Democratic majority, last Presidential election, 32,818. At election for Lieutenant-Governor, November, 1879, Republican vote, 435,304, Democratic vote, 435,014, Greenback vote, 23,067, Prohibition vote, 3,902, "Scattering" vote, 4,829. A Governor was elected at same time, but large sections of both parties revolting against their respective candidates for that office, the vote for Governor failed to test the party strengths.

Mode of Electing Presidents.

EACH State shall appoint, in such manner as the legislature thereof may direct, a number of electors equal to the whole number of Senators and Representatives to which the State may be entitled in Congress; but no Senator or Representative, or person holding an office of trust or profit under the United States, shall be appointed an elector. Const., Art. II., Sec. 1.

The electors shall meet in their respective States and vote by ballot for President and Vice President, one of whom, at least, shall not be an inhabitant of the same State with themselves; they shall name in their ballots the person voted for as President, and in distinct ballots the person voted for as Vice President; and they shall make distinct lists of all persons voted for as President and of all persons voted for as Vice President, and the number of votes for each, which lists they shall sign and certify and transmit, sealed, to the seat of the government of the United States, directed to the President of the Senate. The President of the Senate shall, in the presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the certificates, and the votes shall then be counted. The person having the greatest number of votes for President shall be the President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed, and if no person have such majority, then from the persons having the highest numbers, not exceeding three, on the list of those voted for as President, the House of Representatives shall choose immediately, by ballot, the President. But in choosing the President, the vote shall be taken by States, the representation from each State having one vote: a quorum for this purpose shall consist of a member or members from two-thirds of the States, and a majority of all the States shall be necessary to a choice. And if the House of Representatives shall not choose a President whenever the right of choice shall devolve upon them, before the fourth day of March next following, then the Vice President shall act as President, as in the case of the death or other constitutional disability of the President.

The person having the greatest number of votes as Vice President shall be the Vice President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed, and if no person have a majority, then from the two highest numbers on the list the Senate shall choose the Vice President; a quorum for the purpose shall consist of two-thirds of the whole number of Senators, and a majority of the whole number shall be necessary to a choice. But no person constitutionally ineligible to the office of President shall be eligible to that of Vice President of the United States. (Const. Amend., Art. XII.)

The Congress may determine the time of choosing the electors, and the day on which they shall give their votes, which day shall be the same throughout the United States. (Const., Art. II., Sec. 1.)

* * * The electors of President and Vice President shall be appointed in each State on the Tuesday next after the first Monday in November in every fourth year succeeding every election of a President and a Vice President. U. S. Rev. Stats., Sec. 131.

Each State may, by law, provide for the filling of any vacancies which may occur in its college of electors, when such college meets to give its electoral vote. Sec. 133.

Whenever any State has held an election for the purpose of choosing electors, and has failed to make a choice on the day prescribed by law, the electors may be appointed on a subsequent day in such a manner as the legislature of such State may direct. Sec. 134.

The electors for each State shall meet and give their votes upon the first Wednesday in December in the year in which they are appointed, at such place, in each State, as the Legislature of such State shall direct. Sec. 135.

The electors shall make and sign three certificates of all the votes given by them. * * * Sec. 138.

* * * They shall, by writing under their hands, or under the hands of a majority of them, appoint a person to take charge of and deliver to the President of the Senate, at the seat of government, before the first Wednesday in January then next ensuing, one of the certificates.

They shall forthwith forward by the post office to the President of the Senate, at the seat of government, one other of the certificates.

They shall forthwith cause the other of the certificates to be delivered to the judge of that district in which the electors shall assemble. Sec. 140.

Congress shall be in session on the second Wednesday in February succeeding every meeting of the electors, and the certificates, or so many of them as have been received, shall then be opened, the votes counted, and the persons to fill the offices of President and Vice President ascertained and declared, agreeable to the Constitution. Sec. 142.

The "War Amendments" to the Constitution.

Article XIII.

Neither slavery, nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime, whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction.

Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

Article XIV.

Section 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty or property, without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

2. Representatives shall be apportioned among the several States according to their respective numbers: counting the whole number of persons in each State, excluding Indians not taxed. But when the right to vote at any election for the choice of electors for President and Vice President of the United States, Representatives in Congress, the Executive and Judicial officers of a State, or the members of the Legislature thereof, is denied to any of the male inhabitants of such State, being twenty-one years of age and citizens of the United States, or in any way abridged, except for participation in rebellion, or other crime, the basis of representation therein shall be reduced in the proportion which the number of such male citizens shall bear to the whole number of male citizens, twenty-one years of age, in such State.

3. No person shall be a Senator or Representative in Congress, or elector of President or Vice President, or hold any office, civil or military, under the United States, or under any State, who, having previously taken an oath, as a member of Congress, or as an officer of the United States, or as a member of any State Legislature, or as an executive or judicial officer of any State, to support the Constitution of the United States, shall have engaged in insurrection or rebellion against the same, or given aid or comfort to the enemies thereof. But Congress may, by a vote of two-thirds of each House, remove such disability.

4. The validity of the public debt of the United States, authorized by law, including debts incurred for payment of pensions and bounties for services in suppressing insurrection or rebellion, shall not be questioned. But neither the United States, nor any State, shall assume or pay any debt or obligation incurred in aid of insurrection or rebellion against the United States, or any claim for the loss or emancipation of any slave; but all such debts, obligations and claims shall be held illegal and void.

5. The Congress shall have power to enforce, by appropriate legislation, the provisions of this article.

ARTICLE XV.

The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States, or by any State, on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude.

The Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

Mode of Conducting Presidential Campaigns.

Each political party maintains a national committee (composed of one member from each State and Territory) with headquarters at New York during the campaign. The duties of this committee are to raise funds for the campaign by solicitation of wealthy individuals or corporations whose sympathies or interests are with the party; to apportion those funds among the several objects and localities connected with the campaign; to provide, maintain and distribute political orators; to circulate pamphlets of political information, argument, or invocation; to furnish information, advice and suggestion to the party press; to collect and disseminate news of the States and prospects of the canvass, and, generally, to overlook and manage the national interests of the party. Communications addressed as follows: "To the Secretary of the Democratic National Committee," or, "To the Secretary of the Republican National Committee," at "New York City," will reach their proper destination and secure proper attention.

Each party maintains at Washington a "Congressional Campaign Committee," whose functions are to levy and collect assessments upon the salaries or emoluments of such federal officers or employees as are under control of the party; to distribute copies of approved speeches made in Congress, orations at political meetings, compilations of "facts" interesting to voters, or comparative exhibits of the "record" of the rival parties upon leading questions, in close or doubtful congressional districts, and, incidentally, to aid the national committee in its work in the several States. Communications addressed as follows: "To the Secretary of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee," or, "To the Secretary of the Republican Congressional Executive Committee," at "Washington, D. C.," will reach their proper destination and receive their proper attention.

Each party maintains in each State a "State Central Committee," with headquarters at the State capital, or the chief commercial city. The duty of this committee is to advise the national committee of the prospects and needs of the campaign in the several parts of the State; to collect funds from sources not reached or approached by the national committee; to receive, allot, and evoke popular enthusiasm for the orators sent by the national committee; to utilize the local party speakers in supplementing the work of the national orators; to arrange popular processions, meetings and barbecues; to organize local clubs and uniformed bodies for street parades; to advise and inform the local party press, and generally to serve and preserve the local party interests in all allowable ways. Communications should be addressed as follows: "To the Chairman of the Democratic [or "Republican"] State Committee;" and if the headquarters be not certainly known, it should be directed to both the State capital and the chief commercial town, so that the post office may send it from one to the other in search of its proper destination.

Persons desirous of federal employment, who are physically and intellectually qualified for the kind or class of employment they desire, and who have a fair amount of political or social influence at command, may materially strengthen their claims if they can succeed in getting themselves known to the State, Campaign, or National committee as a zealous and useful worker for the party. The collection of funds, the getting-up of clubs and public demonstrations, the winning over of known political opponents among the voters, the listing of every doubtful voter, so that each one may be personally reached by influence, oral argument, and suitable printed matter, the detection and pointing out of opportunities or obstacles in townships or other small districts, the scrutiny of registration lists, the bringing up of absent voters to the polls, and the challenging of illegal voters, are among the services capable of being performed by almost any aspirant for public office, and, if well performed, certain to be appreciated in the proper quarters.
